GREAT BRITAIN AND AMERICA 'EQUALLY' INTERESTED IN WAR DEBT, BANKER SAYS

English Speaker Declares His Country Will Meet Her Obligations To U. S.

PICTURES ECONOMIC OUTLOOK AS DISMAL

Financier Frankly Declares England Only Ally Able To Pay Her Debt

BY LUTHER A. HUSTON
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The problem of adjustment of international debts is one "in which England and America are equally concerned and in which both have the same interest as creditors," the Right Honorable Reginald McKenna, former chancellor of the British exchequer, told the American Bankers' Association here.

Great Britain will pay her debt to the United States, McKenna said, but he intimated strongly that he regarded adjustment of other foreign debts as closely co-related with the time the payment is to be made and the mode of payment that is to be followed.

It was not a rosy picture of world economic conditions that the head of the London Joint City and Midland Bank, Ltd., one of the strongest financial institutions in Europe, painted to the 10,000 delegates attending the convention. The process of adjustment, he pointed out, necessarily will be a difficult one and cannot be accomplished without a considerable elapse of time.

The British financier frankly expressed the belief that England is the only European nation that can pay her debts. The amount of their obligations that other European countries ultimately will pay, he declared, must be decided at a conference of debtors and creditors.

Analysts of McKenna's speech, in view of his remarks that England and America are both "equally concerned" in the foreign debt problem, saw in this declaration an intimation of his belief that settlement of the debt question must involve participation of the United States in a parley at which the entire financial tangle of Europe would be straightened out.

At the outset of his address which discussed "reparations and international debts" McKenna declared that he spoke as a "banker expressing my personal views."

McKenna emphasized his belief that economic facts must outweigh political considerations in the solution of the debt and reparations problems. "A better understanding of international trade and of the possible limits of international payments will quickly enable us to find a remedy for the evils that now distract us," he said. "There will be a general agreement that there is no matter of more deep concern to the world's trade at the present time than reparations payments."

PRESIDENT FAVORS 'SAVING WAGE' FOR RAILROAD WORKERS

(By International News Service)

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 4.—President Harding is in favor of the "saving wage" for railroad workers, Secretary of Labor James G. Davis declared today in addressing the convention of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees and Railway Shopmen.

"The President," said Davis, "believes that the railroad worker is of such importance in the national existence that his wages and his conditions under which he works should be such as to make his employment so attractive that strikes will be impossible."

The fact that certain railroad executives are unable to maintain proper relations with their employees "should not be made an excuse for the latter to attack the whole transportation system," Davis said.

The railroad owners of the country were absolved of the charge of hostility toward organized labor by the Secretary of Labor.

"Practically all of our railroads are owned by long lists of stockholders," he said. "I can find no ground for any quarrel with the railroad owners."

FOREST FIRES ARE DOING BIG DAMAGE

(Associated Press.)

DULUTH, Minn., Oct. 4.—North Minnesota's forest fire area continued to be a veritable sea of smoke today, with the fires in some places under control while in other places beyond control and threatening further destruction.

In St. Louis County 150 fires are raging. The inhabitants have removed from the threatened area.

There were little indications today that the prayers of the whole country for less wind and lots of rain would be answered.

NEGRO FIREMAN IS FRIGHTENED BY MOB BUT GIVEN RELEASE

(By International News Service)

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 4.—John Brown, negro fireman on the Louisville & Nashville Railroad between Montgomery and Mobile, figured that his time to say good bye had come when several masked men in five automobiles drove up to his home at 440 Bell Street during the early hours of yesterday and commanded him to accompany them.

Brown did and after telling the white man that he had done nothing and had nothing to do with the escape from Montgomery of James Glenn, another negro fireman, accused of the murder of Albert Samsom, mounted policeman, the party returned the L. & N. fireman to his house unharmed.

The report had spread that Brown had secreted the alleged murderer in the engine cab and had carried him to Mobile.

SUPPLY SHIP IS SENT TO NEAR EAST

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Loaded to capacity with provisions and clothing the 9,000 ton supply ship Bridge will leave Hampton Roads, Va., late today or tomorrow for Constantinople, the navy department was advised this afternoon. The departure of the Bridge has been delayed pending the arrival from Philadelphia of a new generator for the battleship Utah, now at Gibraltar.

Some of the supplies aboard the Bridge are for the use of the personnel of the destroyer fleet now gathering in Turkish water but most of the cargo will be used for emergency relief. The tanker Brazos, enroute from Port Arthur, Texas, to Hampton Roads, was ordered today by the navy department to proceed directly to Gibraltar with her cargo of oil to supply American war vessels in Europe.

In a radio report to the navy department, Commander Early, of the Brazos, gave October 14 as the probable date of her arrival at Gibraltar.

CONTRACT AWARDED FOR LAWRENCE PIKE AND WORK TO START ON ROAD VERY SOON

Tennessee Company's Bid Has Been Accepted For Building New Highway

WORK PROGRESSES ON THE MORGAN PROJECTS

Moulton Road Will be Resurfaced Says Report in Official Circles Here

Contract for construction of that part of the Decatur and Moulton pike within the jurisdiction of the Lawrence County authorities, has been let to a Tennessee road building company, and work will begin on it at once. This will open up a thoroughfare to all the year travel between two important parts of the country, over which there is annually much travel.

It is understood that the Morgan County part of this road will be reconstructed also and put in good shape.

The other roads of the county are being built with all the rapidity possible. On the East pike out from Hartselle, sand is being delivered along the way with which to top dress the asphalt which will be applied on it. A force of men is now at work on that part of this road already built, opening up the ditches along the way and otherwise leveling the sides on both sides, of the macadam construction.

The work of resurfacing and reconstructing the pike west of Hartselle is being carried forward with a large force of men at work. On the Bee Line Highway, beginning at the Cullman County line, three and one-half miles has already been constructed and is complete with the exception of the top dressing of asphalt. The weather has been ideal for work on the highways, and it is understood that there has been splendid progress made on every project under construction.

The construction of the road leading to Valhermosa Springs from a point connecting with the east pike out of Hartselle is well under way, and it is understood to be a very fine piece of work, according to those who have viewed it. As a county, Morgan is rapidly emerging from dirt roads to macadam thoroughfares and with the completion of the projects already under construction, something like 60 miles of new roads will have been constructed in the county, not including the resurfacing work or work on the Bee Line Highway. This is a matter of considerable pride to those who have constantly advocated good roads, and the rewards are soon to be realized.

Yankees Without Good Southpaw

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The Yankees are the first team in the history of the modern world's series to attempt to win the big title without the services of a good left hander. Bush, Shawkey, Hoyt, Mays and Jones, the five star pitching staff are all right handers.

HAPPY CROWD OUT FOR GAME

YANKEES 000 001 100—2 7 4
GIANTS 000 000 03x—3 10 3

(By International News Service)

POLO GROUNDS, N. Y., Oct. 4.—Thirty eight thousand souls, in festive mood, hardly in-keeping with the more or less convention character of the occasion, watched the New York Giants and the New York Yankees meet in the opening game of the second all-Manhattan world's series today.

It was a capacity crowd, filling every seat in the huge saucer, and for some reason an extremely happy one, in spite of the fact that many of those in the bleachers and unreserved sections, spent the night outside the gates. The gates were thrown open at 10 o'clock and a crowd of more than 5,000 otherwise normal citizens, rushed the choice seats in the unreserved sections. Steadily then, like a marching army, came the remainder of the crowd, quickly filling in the early gaps in the stand.

By noon there was not a seat left vacant in either of the unreserved stand. The lower grand stand and boxes were sold out days ago. This was New York's mute reply to the assertion that it would not rise to another private world's series.

The Giants came on the field at 12:18 p. m. and the Yankees entering at 12:50.

Yankees lined up as follows: Witt, center field; Dugan, 4b; Ruth, lf; Pipp, 1b; Meusel, lf; Schang, c; Ward, 2b; Scott, s. s.; Bush, p.

Kelly struck out. Stengel fanned. Three runs, four hits, no errors.

Ninth Inning.

Yankees—Pipp singled to start the ninth, through short. Meusel up. Ball 1. Strike 1, he missed it. Meusel hit into a double play, Frisch to Kelly. Schang out Frisch to Kelly. No runs, one hit, no errors.

It is not anticipated that there will be any serious difficulty in reaching an ultimate settlement.

WE FAVOR ACCEPTANCE OF HENRY FORL'S BID FOR MUSCLE SHOALS.

TIMES HAVE CHANGED AND WITH THEM THE THOUGHTS OF THE PEOPLE.

One year ago yesterday General Pershing, in behalf of this country, laid the Congressional medal of honor upon the grave of the unknown soldier in Paris.

A few years before that time Pershing appeared in France as the commander in chief of an army whose avowed purpose was to make a war that would end all wars.

Months before General Pershing and his army went to Europe, the American people were told that our participation in the World War would make the world a safe place to live.

Today, we hear of wars more frequently than before the days of the "last great conflict". The Russians—the first nation to break faith with her allies in the great war—are now reported to be mobilizing a great army on the Rumanian frontier preparatory to aiding the Turks.

The British and the Turks are drawn up in battle array at this moment, and before another newspaper can be printed and delivered, they may be joined in a mighty conflict.

Back of the disturbance now on in the Near East, is a lot of that hateful secret diplomacy, which was denounced so bitterly by everybody during and just following the World War.

Two countries—France and England—in spite of pious protestations, for many months have been believed to be guilty of playing two small countries against another (Greece and Turkey) for reasons best known to themselves. The French wishing to control the eastern end of the Great Sea, while the British desired to command the opening to the straits of the Dardanelles. But these straits are the warm water outlet of the great country of Russia; hence it is not hard to guess why the Russians are preparing to join with the Turk.

In the Crimean war, England fought Russia to a stand still, for the control of the Dardanelles, and she may have to fight the Great Bear once again for the same reason. "Wars and Rumors of Wars"! Indeed we are living in perilous times. There were many who saw long ago how unchanging human nature is, and who realized that unless a league to enforce peace was formed, there could be no reasonable hope of an end of war. In our time this class of thinkers were led by Ex-President Wilson, who said we should help form and enter a League of Nations, pledged to prevent war.

But did we do it—a thing even the league's enemies said before politics beckoned more convincing proof of how dead the league is to all practical purposes, can be found than a little news item of yesterday as follows: "Resolved, that the United States should immediately join the League of Nations," is to be the subject of a debate in Boston this evening between student teams of Harvard and Oxford universities."

The "League of Nations" for which Wilson gave his life, now only an academic question: And discussed by mere students! Oh, my masters!

"When the devil was sick, the devil a saint would be
"When the devil was well, a devil of a saint was he!"

Good morning Mr. Fall, glad to see you. Although you bring with you the first frosts of the season, you are welcomed. You bring with you many good things which the days of summer has made possible, and into the garners of the country these are gathered to be used for the sustenance of the nation.

Progressive and anxious parents would do well to inform their small sons that a bathing department has been added to at least one penitentiary, with the prospect that the added torture will become general.

"TINO'S" SECOND FALL.

The abdication of King Constantine is his second surrender of the throne of Greece in less than ten years.

Constantine succeeded to the throne on March 18, 1913, after the assassination of his father, King George, at Saloniki.

He was unpopular before he ascended the throne, having been dismissed as commander of the army in response to public clamor, but in 1912 he won the title of "The Liberator" by his military leadership, which resulted in the defeat of the Turks and the capture of Saloniki.

His marriage to Sophia, sister of the then German Kaiser, was unpopular and during the World War the pro-Germanism of the Greek court was so pronounced that finally the Allies were forced to send an ultimatum to the Greek premier, which demanded the abdication of Constantine.

Greek independence was obtained in 1830 as the result of a combined attack upon the Turks by the British, French and Russians. These nations exercised a protectorate over Greece and they based their interference in 1917 on this ground. They charged Constantine with having violated the constitution of the country and his removal followed in June of that year.

Constantine took refuge in Switzerland, where he remained until December, 1920, when he was recalled to the throne as the result of a popular election, which revealed 90 percent of the electorate in favor of his return.

During his absence Prince Alexander had succeeded to the throne, but the ruling power was Premier Venizelos. Alexander died in 1920 from the effects of a bite of a pet monkey. Venizelos reigned with the return of Constantine and the latter was left undisputed ruler.

In drafting the Treaty of Sevres, Venizelos drove a hard bargain and won control of Smyrna and the largest part of Thrace for Greece.

Mustapha Kemal Pasha, then coming into prominence as the head of the Ankara government, protested to the Allies against Greek rule of Turkish provinces and the Allies modified the treaty to an extent which infuriated the Greeks and led to war between Greece and the Kemalists.

Constantine took personal command of his armies and in the early days of the war he won numerous victories which again established him as a hero at home. He was stricken with illness while with the army and his recovery was regarded as remarkable.

The success of Venizelos at the peace conference had aroused the Greek people to a high pitch of enthusiasm as they saw within their grasp the restoration of the old eastern empire. They flung themselves into the war to retain control of Smyrna and to hold Thrace with abandon. When Constantine proved unable to check the Kemalist drive, his people turned against him, and for a second time he steps down and out, leaving Prince George to restore order.

The new king of Greece is more popular than his father. He has inherited a military leadership which was demonstrated in the recent fighting. In 1921 he was married to Princess Elizabeth of Rumania, an alliance which was regarded with favor by the Greeks.

But the throne of the Greek king is by no means stable and a people depressed by successive defeats may destroy the monarchy and try a republican form of government. The return of Venizelos from exile is not improbable and the eyes of many Greeks are turned in his direction.

Measured by results, Constantine left Greece better off territorially than he found it. He was a better soldier than he was a politician, and he is the victim of the veering winds of public opinion.—Nashville Tennessean.

There is one good thing about cheap money in Russia and other such countries—the temptation to counterfeit is removed—Pollyanna.

The home run King—will abdicate in favor of the football hero—immediately after the close of the world's series.

Constantine is not expected to ever regain his Grecian throne—but you never can tell.

If the Near East flurry is not over by world series time, it had as well be, so far as the Western Hemisphere is concerned.

The basest thing is ingratitude. It raises its hoary head in every locality, and yet those who should be the recipients of gratitude continue their beneficent acts unabated. There is a reason; one is true, the other untrue.

VALUABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR RURAL COMMUNITY CENTERS.

One of the most valuable of the Farmers' Bulletins issued by the United States Department of Agriculture is now ready for distribution and it is announced by Congressman Lamar Jeffers that he will be glad to have copies of the bulletin, as well as others sent to any of the people in this congressional district who will let him know that they wish them.

The bulletin referred to here is No. 1274, on "Uses of Rural Community Buildings." Because of the great interest that now is being shown in rural community improvement and the need for community centers around which the activities of the community life may move, the suggestions made in this bulletin are of especial value.

Introductory to the information given and the suggestions made in the bulletin, reference is made to the revival of the community spirit in this country, really one of the most hopeful signs of the times. Of this revival the bulletin says:

The revival of community spirit in the country has become more and more a feature of American life. Neighborliness is keeping pace with other forms of progress in small towns and rural communities. In colonial times people went to the meeting-house as a common gathering place for mutual aid and self-development. During the Revolutionary period the people gathered in the town meeting house for political and social purposes. In the days of the settlement of the West, the people used to come together in the "little red school house," the one-roomed church, the hall over the grocery store, or "to meet round" from house to house, in order to gratify their social desires. Life was simple and restricted. There were few cities. People lived in the country or in villages or small towns. There was a well-defined rural social life. As the country became more prosperous, large cities grew up, offering an increasing number of diversions and forms of recreation. The country people were gradually drawn to the cities for their amusement. Rural social life gradually declined. In recent years, however, rural people have realized the distinct loss which they sustained when they were drawn from their normal social activities to the more artificial amusements of the cities.

This realization has resulted in a very marked revival of the spirit of co-operation in rural communities over the country generally. It is shown in the activities of the Farmers' clubs, the farm boys and girls' clubs, the home demonstration clubs, all related to farm activities and farm life improvement. These organizations have been fostered by county agents and by the agricultural departments in this and other states, and they have proven a wonderful incentive to a greater spirit of co-operation among rural residents. As a natural result the desire for rural community centers has become evident. The school house has served as such, and so has the country church, and both have served well, but the need for a real community house, where community gatherings may be held, community entertainments may be given and community improvements planned, is felt in many parts of the country.

The farm bulletin mentioned above says the Community building as a distinct institution has arrived, and the department of agriculture has made a study of 256 such buildings, most of them built since 1920. A result of this study is given in the bulletin.

The bulletin, which is in pamphlet form, of 32 pages, contains pictures of a number of Community buildings, the various types of the better class being shown, and a wealth of valuable information is given in connection with the pictures.

Fostering the community spirit in rural life is probably the best work that can be done in behalf of rural life improvement, and the government, through its agricultural department and its special farm representatives, is doing much to make rural home life more pleasant and more comfortable by telling how improvements in existing conditions can be made.—Anniston Star.

Flaps and Flappers

I bought a new automobile of a dealer,
With bumpers of nickel behind and before;
But fearing that some one might possibly steal 'er,
I had my initials engraved on the door.
I purchased some overalls, too, and a jumper,
To wear when I crawled underneath, on my back
Or bending to pump 'er and making tubes plumper,
Whenever I picked up a nice little tack.

From wile, I learned that I drove like the dickens!
She told me, in anger, she'd get out and walk,
Unless I slowed down for the dear little chickens,
Who started to cross with a fluttering squawk!
But when I began to look out for the flappers,
And slowed down according to rules, like a man,
Those smiling entrappers made both of us scappers,
For wile said, "Drive as fast as you can!"

Now, if you're unable to tell 'em apart, sir,
My better half said in a sarcastic way,
"I'll analyze both of 'em right at the start, sir,
Hereafter, your eyes never need go astray."
The flap of the chicken is known by the wings, sir,
The flapper is known by the flickering eye;
With short skirt that clings, sir, and long-legged things, sir,
To wear, so men stare, with two good reasons why.
Why Men Lose The Trail.

Little longer skirts, and we men will be looking where we are going.

DID YOU KNOW

Zachary Taylor was of English descent, his father being a planter. He was born November 24, 1784, near Orange Court House, Virginia. He served his country as a soldier in many campaigns. At the time of his inauguration he was a resident of Baton Rouge, Louisiana, entering upon his duties at the age of 64. President Taylor served only one year, four months and five days, being the second president to die during incumbency. He died July 9, 1850, at 65 years of age, being a victim of bilious fever. Like many of his predecessors he was an Episcopalian. His tenure in office extended over a period from 1849-1850.

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT The Story in Your Heart

Copyright, 1922, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

THE worst thing about it," said the woman with the cheerful smile and the sad eyes, "was that I was afraid I'd stopped caring for him, and I knew if I did that the whole thing was gone—youth, hope, trust, happiness—everything!"
 "So I used to pray—oh, yes I did, regular old-fashioned prayer!—and I always prayed to be helped to keep on loving him; that's all that kept me alive—and him, too."
 "It was hard sometimes, awfully hard. He was so sweet and good-humored, and kindly, and clever, when he was himself. But when he wasn't himself he was mean and stingy, and jealous and fault-finding, and quarrelsome—and oh, so unutterably silly!"

"The Real Jack"

"That was the worst of it—the silliness. It's awfully hard to love a man when he makes you ashamed of him, and I was ashamed of Jack more than half the time."
 "Besides, it's awfully dangerous to be ashamed of a man, or have to apologize for him, or make excuses for him. It hurts his vanity and makes his conceit suffer, and when you hurt a man's self-esteem you kill the only thing that keeps him alive."
 "Do you know what I used to do when Jack was particularly silly, and made me particularly ashamed? I used to get out his old letters and read them over and over and hunt up his book—you know that first one he wrote, that was really so wonderful—and I'd say to myself, now that's Jack—the real Jack! He's the one I love, he's the one I respect, he's the one I admire. This other Jack is his twin. He looks like him, talks like him—but it isn't the Jack I married at all."
 "So I managed and pretended, and comforted myself and praised Jack and quoted his old letters and passages from his book, and pulled him back, back, back up out of the slime and the mud and for five years before he died he was the real Jack again and I didn't have to work day and night to keep on loving him.

"See, here's the boy—Jack's boy and mine—he's at college now; captain of the football team, smart as a whip, good as gold and worships the memory of his father."

"Here's the girl—this one in the oval frame. She's visiting her aunt now, but she's coming home in time to go to the junior prom with her brother. He says she'll be the prettiest girl there, too."

"Sweet? She's as sweet as a whole bunch of sweet peas, and as bright as she can be! Doesn't she look exactly like Jack?"

In Our Own Hearts

"I'm so glad I had the courage and the faith to keep on loving him. Don't you think it was worth it?"

And I looked at the two photographs and at the proud mother, and noticed her sad eyes and her cheerful smile, and I said:

"Yes, I guess it was."

And I really do suppose it was—and yet—

I wonder if you would have had the patience and the foresight and the courage to do what this woman did? I wonder if I would, either?

This man really did "come back," but what if he hadn't? What if he had just dragged the woman and the two children down with him into the slime and the mire?

Would the patience and the courage and the faith have paid then? Well, it's all in our own hearts, after all—the story and the way it ends.

I wonder how many of us realize that?

Telephone Crew
Takes Inventory

A large force of men have been engaged for some time past taking an inventory of the property of the telephone company in this county. These inventories are taken annually, and are pretty much along the same lines as a merchant would inventory his stock of merchandise. The number of every pole is taken and the condition of same, the number of wires and glass insulators as well. They crew now is at a point near Hartselle, working out from there in different directions.

"THE ORDEAL" IS HERE.

The Star Wednesday is showing Agnes Ayres in "The Ordeal," first original story to be written directly for the screen by W. Somerset Maugham, author of "The Moon and Sixpence," and "The Circle," will be the feature at The Star Theater today. It is a Paramount picture, starring Agnes Ayres. The cast includes besides the star, other well known players.

Mr. Maugham studied methods in the Lasky studio for three months in order that he might better fix the screen part of his play. When he had finished he left for a long tour around the world that he had been planning for years and was last heard of in the jungles of the Malay Peninsula.

Without Fear.

A little girl was reproached by her mother for ironing her doll's clothes on Sunday. "It's very wicked," said the mother, "to do that on Sunday—and you may be sure the doll sees you." "Oh, then I'm sure," answered the little girl.

NOTABLE CAST IN "NICE PEOPLE" AT PRINCESS

The Princess Thursday advertises an all star cast, a thing much discussed but seldom seen. But there was a real cast worthy of the all-star brand chosen for De Mille's Paramount production of "Nice People," being shown at the Princess Theatre.

Heading the list of notables in this screen play is Wallace Reid, who gives one of the best characterizations of his screen career, Bebe Daniels, star in her own right and member of several stellar casts; Conrad Nagel, a veteran of de Mille all-star productions, and Julia Faye, who has won high praise for her work in several recent De Mille pictures.

The story of "Nice People," is a fitting vehicle for this galaxy of talent. It deals with the problems and dangers confronting the modern girl and her "jazz" tendencies. The theme is timely and powerful and the producer has presented it in a manner that is certain to entertain the spectator immensely.

A supporting cast which includes Claire McDowell, Edward Martinell, Eve Sothorn, Bertram Johns, William Boyd and Ethel Wales equals the record set by the stellar principals in this picture.

SEENA OWENS WEARS RICH GOWNS IN "BACK PAY."

Seena Owens, who has a leading role in "Back Pay," a Paramount picture created by Cosmopolitan Productions coming to the Star Theatre today, selected the magnificent gowns she wears in this picture with the aid of Mrs. Elizabeth Lounsberry, associate editor of "Harper's Bazaar." Together they toured Fifth Avenue and other New York streets in search of the proper gowns because Miss Owens in her role of Hester Bevins, portrays a wildly extravagant young woman who holds the pursestrings of a millionaire's wealth. The gowns are worth a fortune.

Hester Bevins is a country girl who on going to New York falls in with a set of men and women who lead the gayest of lives. Wheeler, a Wall Street man, establishes Hester in a gorgeous apartment, furnished to the queen's taste, and surrounds her with costly furs and jewels fit to ransom a king. In order to have expert guidance in the selection of her apparel Miss Owens enlisted Mrs. Lounsberry in the cause of accurate motion pictures.

"Back Pay" is a Fannie Hurst story, adapted to the screen by Frances Marion. It was directed by Frank Borzage. Besides Miss Owens those who have important roles are: Matt Moore, J. Barney Sherry, Charles Craig and Ethel Duray. The picture is released by Paramount.

"JAZZ" GIRL HEROINE OF FINE PICTURE PLAY

What may happen to the modern jazz girl in her pursuit of pleasure at any cost, is vividly portrayed in William de Mille's latest, "Nice People," which will be shown at the Princess for two days beginning Thursday.

It is a problem play presented in an amusing and entertaining way.

Wallace Reid plays the role of the young American who is unacquainted with the modern and sophisticated girl. Bebe Daniels is delightful as the girl. Conrad Nagel gives one of the finest of his career as the male counterpart of the jazz girl. Julia Faye is the villainess, if that is what you call a cat.

A new method of checking fire is by means of boxes of fire rock just suspended across the roof of the tunnel. Any shock due to an explosion is sufficient to cause them to break away from their supports, and the finely divided dust falls into the passage and prevents the flames from spreading.
